Safety & Product Care

Lock-Jaw collars should never be used to retain weights for overhead lifting, such as 'tricep-extensions' or 'pull-overs'. Furthermore, Lock-Jaw collars are not designed to hold weight plates in a vertical orientation, where the full weight or the plates bears on the collar only. Do not ever rely on a barbell collar to secure weight above any part of yourself or another person!

A Lock-Jaw collar though to be defective, damaged, or not working properly, should NEVER be used as injury may occur. A Lock- Jaw collar that is thought to be damaged should be removed from use immediately so that it cannot be used on fitness equipment. If any Lock-Jaw fails under warranty, contact your place of purchase or AVUS DESIGN LLC at dylan@avusdesign.com.

Your Lock-Jaw collar requires no special maintenance or care. Although it is highly durable, it should be treated with care. You should not drop, throw or crush your Lock-Jaw collar. Rough handling of Lock-Jaw collars will void warranty, shorten their life, and can compromise user safety. If you should notice any of the fasteners on your collar become loose – they MUST BE TIGHTENED IMMEDIATELY using a standard #2 Square-Drive screwdriver. Part replacement is possible and instructions are available upon request.
